On Nov. 16, End Well—a nonprofit working to revolutionize society's approach to end-of-life matters—will hold its annual event at Skirball Cultural Center. Hosted by Yvette Nicole Brown, the speaker lineup includes Amanda Kloots, Tig Notaro, Tembi Locke and a number of experts. "Grief isn't a road any of us choose, but it's a transformative journey that we can embrace. It's become my passion to advocate for the power of embracing grief, for within it lies the potential for growth, compassion, and a deeper connection to our shared humanity," said Kloots upon joining the event. "I'm honored to be a part of this inspiring dialogue and to contribute to the collective understanding of how we can navigate life's most challenging moments." Tickets are now available.
